Mantras

Chapter 7:

Love Mantras

Synopsis

Mantras are said to work at a very deep level where the subconscious mind is a collective consciousness of all the forms of primitive consciousness which exist throughout one's physical and subtle bodies. In this way, they positively affect our aura and give us the energy shields which surround our body. The continuous and dedicated chanting of a mantra can dig into our subconscious crystallized thoughts stored in the organs and glands of our body which can transform our bodily parts into repositories of peace and wisdom.

Mantras can help us in accessing our own inner wisdom, accomplishing our own inner peace, releasing fear and anxiety from us, overcoming the inner barriers for our personal growth and happiness, vitalizing the life force of the whole universe, opening the doorways to more spiritually favourable conditions and spiritual transformation for viewing all powers as personal which in turn, immediately aligns us with the true power of our own life.

Prayer to Glorify

SRILA BHAGAVATA BHUSANA GURU

“vandarū-jana-mandara krsna karnamṛta priyam
dayardra-hṛdayam-gadha radha-tattva-nivedakam
gaura-prema-pradipena loka-kalyana karakam
srila sridhara-devasya sisyaṅvāyam guṇojjvalam
vandamahe gurum bhaktya sri bhagavata bhusanam”

Translation:

I offer my profound obeisance's to my loving Spiritual Master, His Divine Grace Bhagavata Bhusana Gurudeva, who is the best and foremost disciple of His Spiritual Master, Paramahansa Thakura Srila Sridhara Deva Gosvami Maharaja. He is brilliantly adorned with all the divine qualities of his Spiritual Master.

Status: Single

I love the idea of love
I love the idea of me...in love
But, what I love most is that I'm my greatest lover of all time
For now, for always...
I promise not to abuse my love
Or use it in vain
Or wish for a new lover, just to make others feel good
I love myself happily, deeply, reserving the rest for those who find me worthy – and are worthy of me

Status: In a Relationship

Dating is a delight,
Or it's difficult sometimes
But, as it ebbs and flows, my heart only grows
Lord only knows where love will take me, or where I will take love
I only know that I'm a sexy, super, sassy, sultry, seductress
That gives to someone else this joyful, jolly journey inside of me...
As the season of love draws near, let me and my lover be open to giving our hearts the best.

Status: Engaged

There's some time before our wedding,
And there's no time for despair...
My love with my lover is finally here...
It's waiting in red, not waiting in vain,
It's signed, sealed and delivered,
Topping the charts,
Singing, dancing, laughing,
Warming our hearts...
May we spend all seasons of life together...
In the most heated of times, and the coldest times,

In the best of times and worst of times,
May we remember the love that brought us here

Status: Married

When the world's on our shoulders,
We keep love in our hearts...
We don't need one special day
to continue on in our lifetime
of soul-mating baby-making money-shaking argument-starting makeup-sex-having
death-do-us-part-pledging
love.

Status: Widowed

Though you're gone,
my love for you isn't.
Love once known
can never be forgotten.
May the spirits of your world
carry a message, from my heart to yours
on every Lover's Day
that you are my past, my present,
my everything.

Love Mantra #1: Love is Who We Are.

Love isn't just something we feel for others, it's who we are. Though we usually think of love as a stream of emotion flowing between two people, love is more like an ocean that's inside and all around us.

Instead of walking around with a little cup, begging for a few drops of love from others, recognize that you're the huge ocean of love. Let go of the feeling, There's a limit to love and I have to get mine. When you do this, you relax, and your energy expands. Rather than looking at every interaction as a potential source of love—something to fill you up and make you feel good—come to every interaction radiating love. Then you go from being a “love beggar,” to being a “love philanthropist.”

Love Mantra #2: The Purpose of Life is to Expand in Love.

Love is your job description—no matter what you do for a living. If you ever feel unsure of what you're supposed to do in a situation, here's a good rule of thumb: always do what leads to greater love. When you put giving and receiving love at the top of your priority list, you'll definitely experience more everyday success and raise the quality of your life.

Love Mantra #3: The Heart is the Portal to Love.

Your heart is more than a physical pump; it's your ticket to experiencing Love for No Reason. If it's open, love flows freely, both in and out. If it's closed, even with the best intentions, you'll have a hard time being loved or being loving. Try pouring water into or out of a jar if the lid is on. It's a simple case of physics.

Focus your attention on your heart. When your heart feels open, expanded and light, then you know you're on the right track for greater love. When it's shut down, tight or heavy, you know you're going in the direction of less love. When this happens, shift your thoughts, feelings and actions so they support the opening of your heart.

Chapter 8:

Success Mantras

Undying shadows of fear and doubt: Understand that shadows of fear and self-doubt are likely to lurk around often. But that doesn't mean that you allow them to take over you or that they're invincible. Like all of us have our strengths, so we have our weaknesses, shadows are just a reminder of the latter. So remember, don't give them more importance than they deserve.

Embrace and accept: Want to get rid of your weaknesses? Start by accepting their presence. The more you try to keep pushing them away, the more they'll stick like a gag around your ankles. Instead, watch them, learn about them and then decide how you can drive them away.

Conquer: Now that you've accepted your shadows, you'll be a little at peace. But you still won't be completely relaxed till you've overcome them. So get ready for the battle! Some people make up for their weaknesses by developing new strengths, while some people overcome them with courage, practice and perseverance. Decide which path you want to take.

Discover yourself: No matter whom you share your fears with - your shadows will always be yours alone. Understand that shadows are a kind of 'rites de passage' that will help you discover your black spots, vulnerabilities and weaknesses. So don't see them as something you need to shoo away, see them as one of life's many learnings that will help you discover yourself.

Your world view: The greatest mistake we can make is to let our shadows affect our world view. If a great disappointment came your way when you were 19 years old, don't let it take over your mind and allow it to shape your world view when you're 25. That way, you're just getting stuck in the past and shutting out new things that come your way. Let it go so that you can grow.

Looking outwards for strength

As far as winners are concerned, the concept of inner, and not outer power, holds very true. Most successful people don't seek support and acceptance outside. Instead, they take a critical look at themselves, analyze their strengths and shortcomings objectively and strategies towards working on them or making them work to their advantage.

Self Doubt leads to downfall

If you want to make it big, do away with this itch by assessing yourself thoroughly. This will help you figure out your true powers and help you understand your capacity better. Once you comprehend this, set your goals within those capacities and make sure you achieve them.

Impatience is not a virtue

There are no established barons whose success came overnight. So no matter how much effort you put in, you'll mostly always be waiting for results. In some cases, you may not get it right the first time. This means, a lot more waiting and watching to figure out what really strikes gold. None the less, be assured that if you're working hard and smart, there is always a light at the end of the tunnel.

Failures stop only losers

If you have a dream, you can't give yourself just once chance to make it come true. Success stories are often a result of mistakes that made way for new learning. So, put the hours in and be ready to work and re-work things from ground zero to pen your story.

Procrastination

Often guised as advanced thinking, procrastination is nothing but a mighty waste of time. Why spend your time thinking about an issue so much when you could use that time in actually going through with it? That's the difference between dreaming of success and achieving it.

First step to success

Dreaming of success is often the first big step ahead for most individuals. A dream is a seed of thought that opens one's mind to new avenues. If you dream big, the next step is to make a path for yourself to get there!

Valuable insight

Dreams can offer you a lot of insight. They tell you about your state of being and are a much needed reality check about the present. They help you understand your own mind and its wants and needs better, preparing you for the success chase.

Key into the Subconscious

Dreams often represent thoughts that are brewing in our subconscious. If you dream about something that you aren't currently doing, it is often considered an indication about an underlying unrest and a latent desire in you to engage in something you haven't had a chance of doing. This way, dreaming can push you closer to success.

Motivation:

Dreams can be an enormous motivating factor for many people. Champion athletes have often mentioned that they have dreamt about big victories before accomplishing them. In the same way, dreams can boost your morale too and push you to work harder.

Staircase to happiness and achievements

Most people don't know this, but dreams really have the power to elevate your spirits and leave you with a sense of well being. In other words, dreams have the power to make you happy. This happiness usually enhances confidence, taking you much closer to achieving your targets.

Words that spell self-doubt

Failure just needs a seed; and very often words are those seeds! Many a times when you think that you aren't as good as another, you reinforce your thought through words like, "I don't know", "I'm not sure", "I am incapable of", "How can I", and so on. This constant insecurity then spreads to all aspects of your life and before you know it, your self confidence is diminished to the size of a pebble.

Words that provide an easy refuge

Many a times, we seek refuge in words to stay away from doing things we don't want to be confronted with. This gives rise to excuses that begin and end with ifs and buts. When you really want to do something, there should be nothing that stops you from doing it.

Words that ooze negativity

Some sociology and psychology studies often categorize subjects into

'Yes' and 'No' people. While the 'Yes' people are the ones with the positive approach looking out for new things in life, the 'No' people are the ones with the doubtful mindset. With words such as I can't, NO, not me and so on, the 'No' people close doors for themselves. Also, as the words you use represent your worldview and vice versa, using the 'no' word too often will portray you as being narrow minded, restricted and non-experimental.

Words that portray you as a weakling

"If only" I had the support of, "If only" I knew how to, "If only" I had the opportunity to... "If only" you didn't use these words that paint the picture of a person too desperate to shift blame on other people and circumstances, you would emerge stronger. Don't hope for things to be better, make them better by using words such as "Because I can".

Words that indicate you've already accepted defeat

"I probably won't", "it's beyond my control", "I will try but i am not sure" are words that indicate that you're OK with the idea of success not coming your way. In other words, this means that you're OK with losing. Once you have already left this option open to yourself, how will you push yourself to give your hundred percent?

So, if you want to ace the game, banish these words; they serve no more than as mere roadblocks on your way to the top.

Very often a lot of our successes and failures are governed by our primary approach to things. When we choose to accept situations and challenges with a mindset to fight them out rather than give up before we begin, we increase our chances of a win. Here is how saying 'yes' positively affects not only your mental make-up, but also those of the others around you, thus, helping you win battles and attract success:

It changes your perspective

When you say 'yes', you automatically change your perspective. You flip over from the negative or the undecided to the positive, seeing new possibilities.

It allows you to learn something new

A 'yes' is the first step of learning. Only if you agree to go through a new process or a new route will you give yourself the opportunity to learn something new. Who knows, you may even discover things that you really enjoy doing or paths that you may love to explore further.

You win the admiration of others

When you adopt the 'yes' attitude, it doesn't just pertain to the case at hand. Your outlook towards life becomes much more positive and the more you implement it, the more it becomes inherent in you. This clearly does not go unnoticed and hence makes you popular amongst not only those directly associated with you but even amongst those who are superficially connected with you.

It has no negatives

The 'yes' attitude aids in only gains and makes you lose nothing at all. It may involve taking risks and exploring the unexplored but more often than not, you have nothing to lose.

It puts you through a self-test

The reason a 'yes' attitude is the first step of success is because it allows you to test yourself and your capabilities. Agreeing to do something you haven't tried before or something that does not come easily to you lets you gauge your strengths and weaknesses, helping you discover more about yourself.

So go ahead and say 'YES' to challenges. Say 'YES' to success.
